

Acknowledgments

Our life is an apprenticeship to the truth, that around every circle another can be drawn; that there is no end in nature, but every end is a beginning; that there is always another dawn risen on mid-noon, and under every deep a lower deep opens.

—Ralph Waldo Emerson, Essays, First Series, X. Circles, 1841

The “apprenticeship to the truth” that a catalogue of this size represents could only happen through contributions that are nearly impossible to fully acknowledge. Scores of institutions—libraries, other museums and galleries, historical societies, colleges and universities—have assisted with locating images and information. Many individuals have done the same, and contributed at least as much with their good-will efforts to support this publication. The following list is an inherently imperfect effort to thank publicly all those who made Seeing America a significant contribution to the field of American art and culture. Any omissions are unintentional and are my responsibility. I offer apologies in advance.

First, thanks go out to the staff of the Memorial Art Gallery. Grant Holcomb, The Mary W. and Donald R. Clark Director, has been supportive from the first, and it was his passion for the American collection that helped to secure the key initial funding from the Henry Luce Foundation’s American Collections Enhancement initiative. Christine Garland worked long, hard hours over several years to put the funding puzzle together with support from her colleagues in the MAG advancement department. Lu Harper and Susan Nurse have gathered untold reels of microfilm, interlibrary loans, and rights and reproductions permissions. Colleen Griffin-Underhill provided valuable insight into production-related questions. Carol Acquilano, Cynthia Culbert, Jessica Marten, Emily Pfeiffer, and Monica Simpson in the curatorial department have kept the project afloat by attending to authors and managing photoshoots, images, and budgets, as well as the many incidental details generated by a project of this size. Hardworking colleagues added the task of essay-writing to their already full days: Cynthia Culbert, Susan Dodge-Peters Daiss, Marlene Hamann-Whitmore, Grant Holcomb, Susan Nurse, Jessica Marten, Nancy Norwood, and Marie Via.

Special recognition goes to Cynthia Culbert, who joined the Gallery staff in the first phase of the Seeing America project as coordinator of the Henry Luce Foundation American Collections Enhancement grant. She has patiently and painstakingly tended the project through its completion in the form of this publication.

Of course the authors listed in the Table of Contents are all deserving of our thanks, particularly for their cooperation with revisions and their patience with the publication schedule. And again, our thanks to Michael Kammen for his introduction.

Photographers James M. Via and Andy Olenick were responsible for the majority of the beautiful images of artwork from the permanent collection of the Memorial Art Gallery. Donald Strand’s management of the images contributed to the smooth work flow from photographer to designer.

John Blanpied, editor nonpareil, held the project together over more years than I like to think about. Kathryn D’Amanda, with the assistance of Amy Holowczenko, has contributed intelligently and sensitively to the aesthetics of the printed page with her visionary design services. Tony Harris and Monroe Litho, Rochester, New York, were consistently supportive of the project and contributed generously to its production. And thanks to the University of Rochester Press and its staff who have collaborated with us in the distribution of the publication.

Memorial Art Gallery interns were diligent factcheckers. They include: Rebekah Biss, Erin A. Buch, Rebecca Merritt, Molly Searl, Lisa Szkolnik, and Erin Train. Multiple libraries in the region played a part in locating books, journals, and microfilm. In particular, Rush Rhees Library of the University of Rochester, and its Department of Rare Books, Special Collections and Preservation, as well as Interlibrary Loan Services, provided important support to its sister department, the Charlotte Whitney Allen Library at the Memorial Art Gallery. Also, the Rochester Public Library System and the State University of New York at Geneseo's Milne Library were valuable resources for our intrepid team. The Archives of American Art of the Smithsonian Institution is a national treasure for which I and my fellow researchers give thanks.

I also want to thank the following individuals and institutions for their cooperation, and recognize that this ambitious undertaking happened only with their assistance and generous contribution of time, energy, and in some cases financial resources:

Nathalie Andrews, Portland Museum, Louisville, Kentucky; Tim Barnes; Edwin Bingham; James Bishop; Jean Bellows Booth; Elizabeth Bouvier, Massachusetts State Archives; Elizabeth Brayer; David Burnhauser, The New-York Historical Society; Virginia Cordner; Margaret R. Dakin, Amherst College Library Archives and Special Collections; Daria D'Arienzo, Amherst College Library Archives and Special Collections; Julie A. Dunn-Morton, Ph.D., St. Louis Mercantile Library at the University of Missouri-St. Louis; Pamela Erwin; Trevor Fairbrother; Jennifer Fauxsmith, Massachusetts State Archives; Dr. William Gerdtz; John Gorsline; Marie Gorsline, Musée Gorsline, Bussy-le-Grand, France; Jeremy Greaves; Gene Gropper; Jack Gumbrecht, The Historical Society of Pennsylvania; Erika Holmquist-Wall, The Minneapolis Institute of Fine Arts; the late Donelson Hoopes; Kathleen Houston; Nathan Johnson; Karl Kabelac; William Keeler, Landmark Society of Western New York; Gary Kerstetter, Bayport-Blue Point (New York) Library; Marion Kolisch; Elisabeth Mankin Kornhauser, Wadsworth Athenaeum; Dr. M.S.A. Kumar, Cummings School of Veterinary Medicine at Tufts University; Frances Lennie; Nancy Martin, Rare Books, Special Collections and Preservation, Rush Rhees Library, University of Rochester; Dr. Howard Merritt; Jerome and Sandy Morgan; Dr. Kevin Nibbe; Mary Kate O'Hare, The Newark Museum; Dr. Linda Dugan Partridge; Rochester Historical Society; Professor James Ramage, Northern Kentucky University; Wilson Rood; Frank Sadowski; Ken Scott; Brian J. Scriven, Historic Site Manager, Letchworth State Park; Rebecca Searl; Charlotte Sherman, Heritage Gallery, Pacific Palisades, California; Christian Sonne, Town Historian, Tuxedo Park, New York; Dr. Theodore Stebbins, Fogg Art Museum, Harvard University; Dr. Norma S. Steinberg; David Svahn, Christ Church, Cooperstown, New York; Maria Terrone; Judy Throm, Archives of American Art; Yale University Beinecke Rare Book and Manuscript Library; and Mr. and Mrs. Alan Yassky.

It has been my honor and MAG's to have received the benefit of working with so many people and institutions, both known to us and anonymous, in the compilation of this catalogue. Their contributions will lead, we hope, to additional discoveries about, and deeper insights into, this rich collection of art.

Marjorie B. Searl